Description

Introductory description

Why does intercultural misunderstanding occur in communication? Conversely, what do we need to know and do in order to be able to effectively build and maintain relationships across cultures? This module provides an introduction to the nature of the cultural expectations that shape how linguistic and non-linguistic behaviour is interpreted, how social attitudes shape our perceptions of self and other, and the various strategies by which rapport can be managed within the context of intercultural relations.

Module aims

The aim of this module is to provide students with a critical understanding of concepts, theories and research findings associated with culture and interpersonal relations. They will collect and analyse a small amount of research data, and through the multidisciplinary design of the module, they will examine the strengths and weaknesses of different conceptual approaches. They will apply their conceptual analyses to the challenges of managing interpersonal relations in professional contexts.

The module will contribute primarily to the achievement of Course Aims #1 and #4, but will also contribute to #5 and #3:

#1: Provide a thorough grounding in theories and research findings related to intercultural interaction and linguistics;

#4: Enable students to analyse cross-linguistic features and contexts, and authentic cross-cultural and intercultural discourses using both quantitative and qualitative methods;

#5: Develop students' ability to use language sensitively and effectively in intercultural contexts; ;

#3: Provide a solid foundation in relevant research skills and methods, both quantitative and qualitatively.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

INTERCULTURAL PRAGMATIC PERSPECTIVES

Speech acts across cultures:

e.g. Requests, apologies, compliments, offers etc. in different languages and cultures
