Description

Introductory description

In this module, we will explore the fertile ways in which the histories and aesthetics of experimental film and documentary film have overlapped. We will use this enquiry to inform a practical engagement with the techniques of documentary video and sound recording. The module will consist of a combination of screenings, seminars, practical workshops, and fieldwork.

Led by the module tutor, you will view, listen to and discuss a series of experimental documentary works, and engage with a series of key theoretical works. This seminar-based critical-theoretical work will fuel the practical experimentation undertaken as part of the workshops. These workshops will allow you to explore issues of technique, method, aesthetics and ethics through fieldwork and practical tasks.

You will gain sufficient skills in sound and video recording to allow you to develop inventive, critically informed practical approaches to the investigation of space and society using audio-visual technologies.

Module aims

The aim of this module is to explore the overlapping historical aesthetics of experimental film and documentary, and to use this enquiry to inform a practical engagement with the techniques of documentary video and sound recording. Led by the module tutor, students will view and discuss a series of experimental documentary works, and engage with a series of key theoretical works. This seminar based critical-theoretical work will fuel the practical experimentation undertaken as part of the workshops. Students will gain sufficient skills in sound and video recording to allow them to develop inventive, critically informed practical approaches to the investigation of space and society using audio-visual technologies.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

Week 1: Sensory Ethnography

Viewing: Leviathan (Lucien Castaing-Taylor and Verena Paravel, 2012)

Listening: Materials Recovery Facility (Ernst Karel, 2012)

Workshop: Using 'action' cameras.

Week 2: Landscape

Film: El Valley Centro (James Benning, 2001), Hymns of Muscovy (Dimitri Venkov, 2017)

Workshop: Static video, framing, learning to film with a tripod.

Week 3: Time and Work

Viewing: Los (James Benning, 2001), Lunch Break (Sharon Lockhart, 2009)

Workshop: Static video, long duration.

Week 4: Soundscape and Field

Listening: Voices of the Rainforest (Steven Feld, 1991), Stepping into the Dark (Chris Watson, 1996).

Workshop: Basic sound recording, recording in the field, alternative techniques.

Week 4: Cartography

Viewing: C'était Une Rendezvous (Claude Lelouch, 1976).

Listening: peripheries (Katharina Klement, 2017).

Workshop: Sound maps and audio-walks

Week 6: Reading Week

Week 7: Architecture

Viewing: selection of short experimental film and video works including Side/Walk/Shuttle (Ernie Gehr, 1992), Shift (Toshio Matsumoto, 1982), A Tropical House (Karl-Heinz Klopff, 2015).

Workshop: proposing student projects, fieldwork

Week 8: The Invisible

Viewing: Night Without Distance (Lois Patino, 2002), Thames Film (William Raban, 1986)

Listening: Sensing Electromagnetics (Various Artists, 2016)

Workshop: developing student projects, fieldwork

Week 9: Studio time, developing student projects.

Week 10: Studio time, developing student projects.

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Students will develop both practical and theoretical approaches to documentary, through an engagement with a variety of examples of experimental documentary practice being used to investigate a range of environmental, political, and cultural issues. The practical work will help them to engage inventively with the theory, and the theoretical grounding will allow them to develop innovative and rigorously experimental practical work. At the end of the module students will undertake a practical project (negotiated with the module tutor) employing sound and/or video recording techniques. They will develop their own conceptually rationalised practical method for investigating an issue of their choice.

Research element

For the final student led project (80% of the final mark) each student develops a documentary project. During the term they submit a Project Proposal (20% of the final mark) in which they conceptualise the form and rationale for a documentary project based on research into a chosen subject. In the final two weeks of the term they develop this project through supervised studio work.

Interdisciplinary

The module focuses on developing methodological approaches to investigating various cultural, political, economic and geographic phenomena using video and sound recording. As such the advanced practical documentary techniques learned on the module are applied within student led research projects that crossover into fields such as: ethnography; architecture; urban planning; geography, sociology, anthropology, political economics.

Subject specific skills

This module develops skills of audio-visual literacy, through close textual and/or contextual analysis in relation to the moving image and sound. It may also develop understandings of historical, theoretical and conceptual frameworks relevant to screen arts and cultures.

Transferable skills

- critical and analytical thinking
 - independent research skills
 - team work
 - ability to 'pitch' a project
 - practical skills: proficiency with professional video cameras, sound recorders and editing software, advanced skills in recording in the field
 - clarity and effectiveness of communication in oral, written and audio-visual forms
 - accurate, concise and persuasive writing
 - audio-visual literacy
