Description

Introductory description

The dramatized dissertation will provide an opportunity for in-depth research, sophisticated writing and multi-media presentation, with the possibility of high-level group work depending upon the level of uptake within connected subject areas. Where appropriate, candidates will be encouraged to work in groups to produce different parts (“Acts”) within longer dramatic works. Candidates will be assessed on their individual parts (“Acts”).

What is expected of me? The full module Dramatized Dissertation will have a maximum word limit of 6,000 words (comprising 1,000 word reflective prologue and 5,000 dramatic script) and will be totally assessed.

Marks are allocated in two blocks of 25% and 75% respectively. The first 25% is allocated to original research into the law and its context as revealed by a (maximum 1,000 word) “reflective prologue”. The second 75% is allocated to accuracy and ingenuity in handling the law and related issues in the context of the dramatic script (maximum 5,000 words) including such aspects as the form and style of the writing and the extent to which the script and performance were effective in communicating relevant law and related issues and effective in presenting the themes identified by the candidate in their reflective prologue.

Appropriate departmental resources will be provided to record a simple audio or audio-visual “readthrough” of the script, which will form part of the 75% submission. A detailed guidance booklet will be supplied to give detailed guidance for candidates on all aspects of the process of working towards submission of their Dramatized Dissertation.

How do I get started? Any student wanting to apply to undertake a Dramatized Dissertation should indicate his/her interest before the end of the preceding Summer Term by returning a completed application form to module convenor. The application form requires students to obtain the agreement of a member of staff willing to act as main supervisor, and agree on a rough title as the subject for the Dramatized Dissertation, and find a second member of staff willing to act as second supervisor/marker. The application form must be accompanied by a 500 word sample dialogue with a view to ascertaining the student’s threshold competence to submit a Dramatized Dissertation. Please discuss the sample script and ideas in detail with the proposed supervisor before submitting an application.

Acceptance for this module will be confirmed after the Second Year Examination Board has met in July. A student who has elected to do, and has been accepted, on the Dramatized Dissertation programme must comply with a timetable agreed with their supervisor for meetings and for the submission of a preliminary draft and the final version.

Module aims

The idea of the Dramatised Dissertation is to permit students to follow up a particular research interest arising out of modules already taken or modules currently being undertaken. The candidate undertaking a Dramatised Dissertation is required to submit their work in the form of a dramatic script such as a play or film script. The dramatised dissertation will provide an opportunity for in-depth research, sophisticated writing and multi-media presentation, with the possibility of high-level group work depending upon the level of uptake within connected subject areas.
