Description

Introductory description

PH9F7 Topics in Philosophy and the Arts

Module aims

This module introduces students to some of the methodological issues raised by approaching art philosophically. What does it mean to approach art philosophically or to undertake the philosophy of a particular art form? How might this differ from doing the theory or criticism of art or of a particular art? Does the philosophy of painting, or film or literature share a set of common questions and concerns, grounded in philosophy, or does philosophy of painting have more in common with theory and criticism of painting than it does with the philosophy of film? Such foundational questions will set the stage for addressing more specific problems in philosophy of art and aesthetics and the theory and philosophy of particular art forms. As such, the module is intended to have the flexibility to combine study of broad theoretical questions with attention to specific theorists, artists, works and events. The goal is to keep both methodological and substantive concerns in view: what kinds of activities, skills, conventions, institutions, historical circumstances, conceptual frameworks, motivations and values are relevant to the making, experience and social functions of art? What resources, perspectives and questions are helpful to theorists aiming to understand artistic practices, achievements, failures, challenges and future possibilities? Here 'the arts' are taken to encompass a wide spectrum of artistic activity, the constitution of which changes historically and is itself contested, but includes literature, cinema, music, dance and other performance arts, in addition to the visual arts, among others. The module will engage students with philosophically reflective work that is informed or triggered by attention to an artistic context or practice. Philosophy will reflect out of its artistic and theoretical objects, but the capacity of those objects to put the assumptions of philosophical methodology into question will also be foregrounded.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

A. General substantive and methodological topics, questions and concerns

1. Art and philosophy
2. Art and knowledge
3. Art and narrative
4. Beauty
5. Aesthetic value and artistic value
6. Aesthetics and empirical science
7. Aesthetics of the everyday

B. More specific questions of relevance to particular arts, thinkers or debates Here topics might focus on a question addressed by various theorists, the work of a single theorist, writings on a single work of art or the oeuvre of a particular artist, an artistic movement or genre, or a philosophical movement relevant to the arts.

1. Philosophical study of particular work/oeuvre/artist/genre
2. Photography as an art
3. Stanley Cavell on popular film
4. Arthur Danto's Philosophies of art and art history
5. Literature and ethical and political criticism
6. Responding to art and responding to others

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- By the end of the module, students will understand and reflect on general methodological and substantive issues raised by approaching art philosophically.
- By the end of the module the student should be able to show an advanced conceptual grasp of issues that link different art practices, that explore theoretical problems in relation to specific art forms, and that bring philosophical concerns into dialogue with the arts
- By the end of the module the student should be able to demonstrate advanced expertise in interpreting and analysing complex texts and critiquing their ideas and arguments
- By the end of the module the student should be able to develop and defend their own views on relevant issues, drawing on autonomously initiated and conducted research.
