Description

Introductory description

This module provides students with a solid foundation in TESOL theory and practice. It explores both historical and contemporary developments in TESOL in order to give students a broad understanding of the field of English language teaching. Through such exploration, students are encouraged to reflectively engage with and develop their own beliefs about language learning and teaching, particularly in relation to educational contexts they are familiar with and/or will return to as practicing teachers.

Module aims

This module is designed to enable students with little or no English language teaching experience to develop their careers in TESOL and associated fields. The module aims to:

- Deepen students' systematic understanding and critical awareness of the trends and debates in modern TESOL pedagogy by building on students' previous learning, teaching and life experience;
- Facilitate students' awareness and critical evaluation of current practice and research concerning TESOL methodology;

- Develop students' understanding of ways in which TESOL methodologies relate to psychological, socio-cultural and educational theory;
- Apply the insights gained above to areas of concern in their own teaching / learning contexts and their own future professional practice.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

The module begins by inviting the students to critically reflect upon their own language learning and teaching experiences and how they reflect underlying beliefs, theories, sociocultural and pragmatic factors in their own contexts. Students will go on to critically consider the characteristics and rationales associated with principal TESOL approaches and methodologies that have been influential in the post-war years. Particular attention will be given to developing students' understanding of the notion of communicative competence and the development of the communicative approach to language teaching. Approaches such as TBLT and CLIL will be explored in the light of the theoretical and practice based understanding developed of the communicative approach to language teaching (CLT). The module will progress to focus on the teaching and learning of vocabulary and grammar, the skills of listening, speaking, reading writing, and ways in which language lessons can be designed that effectively integrate such focuses. Throughout the module, the effective use of ICT in the teaching of English language will be highlighted. Consideration will be given to methodology and the development of autonomy and motivation.

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate comprehensive understanding of principal methodological approaches relevant to TESOL practice
- Develop awareness of and facility with approaches to the evaluation, design and adaptation of classroom materials
- Select and be able to critically evaluate appropriate methodology which responds to the needs of learners and stakeholders in the students' own teaching and learning contexts.
