Module aims

This foundational module aims to provide students with a sound understanding of English legal method within the institutional context of the English Legal System. It introduces the student to various 'Law in Context' methods that are used in the Warwick Law School.

Particular attention is given to sources of law, the techniques of reading and interpreting cases and statutes, understanding legal rhetoric, how to make an argument and essay writing.

These various aspects of the module are combined to produce a critical overview of the machinery of justice at the heart of the English legal system and to provide students with a fluency in fundamental legal techniques.

These techniques will be developed through participatory exercises in seminars whereby students will have the opportunity to test and develop their fundamental legal skills as well as other core skills which they will utilise throughout their legal studies including essay writing, solving problem questions.

Assessment group A1

	Weighting	Study time
Portfolio	100%
MELS is an unusual module in that it is primarily oriented around helping you develop the skills necessary for a law degree. It is also unusual in its assessment. Instead of a single essay or problem question, you will build up a portfolio of your writing. Each seminar develops the skills and knowledge that you need for each of your three assessments. This is called 'feed-forward' in the jargon. There are three parts to your final assessments:
Reflective note on law and the pandemic (500 words, 15%)
Judgement on the Week 5 exercise (750 words, 35%)
Essay on Week 9 exercise (1250 words, 50%)
