Description

Introductory description

The study of politics has included not just the study of how the political world operates, but also the study of how it ought to operate. This module examines a set of issues that have received considerable attention within recent normative political theory.

The module is divided into two parts:

Theories and Principles of Justice, Rawls and after (including the work of John Rawls, Robert Nozick, Ronald Dworkin; patterns of distributive justice)

Contemporary Social, and Political Issues (which examines issues concerning immigration, cultural pluralism, the treatment of non-human animals, gender justice, discrimination, education, housing, the environment and more).

Module aims

To foster a detailed critical understanding of a range of arguments central to contemporary analytical political philosophy.

To foster the ability to analyse and assess opposing arguments in political philosophy.

To foster appreciation of the relevance of arguments in political philosophy to contemporary political and social issues and the ability to apply arguments in political philosophy to a range of such issues.

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Comprehend and critically analyse complex arguments from the literature of contemporary political philosophy.
- Provide an account of your considered judgements about the issues discussed, taking account of a variety of opposing arguments and perspectives.
- Construct your own sustained argument about major political values, and defend it against sceptics, using arguments from other disciplines where appropriate.
