Description

Introductory description

This module aims to offer a critical framework for understanding education in its wider social and historical contexts. The module focuses principally on the UK but also considers global developments and offers students opportunities to consider their own national contexts. You will explore the social purposes of education, considering issues such as: education and social justice; education, the state and social provision; education and the economy; educational inequalities and widening participation. The module will look at how shifts in these areas have informed developments in schools, post-compulsory and higher education

Module aims

This module is the online variant of IE936 and is suitable for part time students. The module aims to offer a critical framework for understanding education in its wider social and historical contexts. The module focuses principally on the UK but also considers global developments and offers students opportunities to consider their own national contexts.

The module will explore the social purposes of education, considering issues such as: education and social justice; education, the state and social provision; education and the economy; educational inequalities; widening participation. It will look at how shifts in these areas have informed developments in schools, post-compulsory and higher education.

This module contributes to the achievement of all four aims of the MA in Education and provides opportunities for students to:

- Engage at an advanced level with issues of significant concern to those involved in education.
- Evaluate the most recent developments in research and policy initiatives on local, national and international levels.
- Develop professionally by considering the implications of the module for practice, including their own practice, where appropriate.
- Develop, utilise and evaluate a range of investigation methods (by completing study units tasks, preparatory activities and a 4,000 or 5,000 word assignment.
There are additional module-specific aims. Students should:
- Develop their critical understanding of theoretical and empirical research into education policy, sociology and practice.
- Deepen their insights into the dynamic interaction that exists between education research, theory, policy and practice.
- Engage critically with current research on educational policy and decision-making.
- Develop a critical understanding of contemporary debates on education in relation to the state, economy and communities.
- Develop a critical understanding of educational inequalities, widening participation and social justice.
