Description

Introductory description

Contemporary language education has recognised that language learning is deeply connected with developing intercultural awareness and the ability to communicate across cultures. However, putting an intercultural perspective into practice has proved a challenge for many teachers and other educational professionals. The module aims to develop your understanding of intercultural language teaching and learning and to design teaching experiences that develop intercultural capabilities. It encourages you to think critically about the ways that language and culture are involved in meaning making and the pedagogical consequences of this for language education. You will be introduced questions relating to the relationship between languages and cultures and how this affects language use, curriculum and pedagogies for teaching intercultural capabilities and how to assess them.

Module aims

The module aims to develop students' understanding of intercultural language teaching and learning and to design teaching experiences that develop intercultural capabilities. It will encourage students to think critically about the ways that language and culture are implicated in meaning making and the pedagogical consequences of this for language education. The content
