Description

Introductory description

A dissertation is an extended essay written according to formal academic conventions. It should demonstrate your research skills, and your ability to formulate an independent perspective on a given subject. It should also be well written and grammatically correct, to demonstrate your literacy skills. Importantly, a dissertation should try to provide answers to a set of questions; it should not just be a narrative. You will work closely with a supervisor as you research and write the dissertation.

Module aims

The dissertation aims to encourage research skills, the critical application of methodology, and independent thinking.
In pursuing an area of interest in much greater detail than is possible in course work it gives you an opportunity to make a significant contribution to the discipline. The result is a significant piece of work which could impress an employer, or lay the ground for postgraduate research.
