Module aims

This module introduces students to the history of global interactions between different parts of the world through a focus on early connections in the period 1200-1500. The module will be set within the theoretical framework of global history. Topics include diasporas, material culture, the Mongol and Timurid empires, the silk roads, global cities, and medieval travellers.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

1. Global Connections and the thirteenth-century world

2. Central Asia and the Silk Roads
3. Maritime explorations: Zheng He and the Arab seafarers
4. Travel and Travellers: Marco Polo, Ibn Battuta and Zhou Daguan
5. Religious connections and the spread of Islam
6. Reading week
7. Cities and migrating communities
8. Science and technology: China and the Islamic World
9. Empires: Mongols, Timurids and Mali
10. Global connections and the sixteenth-century world

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate a detailed knowledge of non-European histories, and their connections with and impact on medieval and early modern European history.
- Communicate ideas and findings, adapting to a range of situations, audiences and degrees of complexity.
- Generate ideas through the analysis of a broad range of primary source material, including visual, material and textual sources.
- Analyse and evaluate the contributions made by existing scholarship, including key concepts in global history.
- Act with limited supervision and direction within defined guidelines, accepting responsibility for achieving deadlines.
