Description

Introductory description

This first part of this module is designed to provide students with a theoretical framework to understand corporate governance problems. To this effect, the module illustrates the origins of the corporate governance debate, and its expression in core UK company law doctrine. Based on a multi-disciplinary approach to corporate governance theories, the module examines the corporate governance regimes in the Anglo-American and Continental European systems with a particular emphasis on the UK system.

The second part focuses on the theoretical and practical ways of regulating corporate activities and markets. It will focus on the reasons why and the techniques used such as risk based approaches, to regulate corporate activities and markets. Attention will be given to the issue of regulation and enforcement both in terms of style and the range of sanctions that could be used to deal with corporate and market failures. Finally, the issue of political and legal accountability will be considered.

Overall, the module aims to provide students with the necessary conceptual tools to enable them to make the most out of their optional modules and dissertation, and in due course to continue to study this key area independently. Throughout the module, the discussion will focus on the normative question of what constitutes an appropriately designed corporate governance and financial regulation regime.

Module aims

This module aims to provide students with a conceptual framework to understand and analyse corporate governance problems. It introduces the main “strain on the corporate web” that is the tenuous relationship between shareholders and directors in large listed companies where there is separation of share ownership from managerial control and then explores the main techniques used to tackle these problems. To this effect, we will explore the provisions of the UK Corporate Governance Code, some relevant Company Law rules and prevailing market practice in the UK and we will draw comparisons to other jurisdictions. We will cover both current topical issues and more policy-oriented topics such as the theoretical debate about the proper purpose and function of large corporations in society.

The module also focuses on the theoretical and practical ways of regulating corporate activities and markets. It will focus on the reasons why and the techniques used such as risk based approaches, to regulate corporate activities and markets. Attention will be given to the issue of regulation and enforcement both in terms of approach and the range of sanctions that could be used to deal with corporate and market failures. We will look at executive remuneration both as a matter of corporate law and governance and as a matter of financial regulation. Finally, the issue of political and legal accountability will be considered.
