Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Subject knowledge and understanding: students should be able to understand and differentiate views on central issues in applied ethics, and offer relevant support for and critical responses to those views.
- Key skills: students should be able to communicate clearly and substantively in speech and in writing on the questions addressed in the module.
- Cognitive skills: students should be able to isolate the important claims within readings, understand the structure of arguments, test views for strengths and weaknesses, make pertinent use of real world examples and case studies to explain and test theories..
- Subject-specific skills: students should be able to pursue and organize philosophical research using a range of sources (print and electronic media and real world case studies), and show the ability to engage independently in philosophical debate.
