Description

Introductory description

PH370-15 Montaigne's Essays

Module aims

The module aims to introduce students to central philosophical arguments and problems in Montaigne's Essays, their historical background, and their historical significance. An ancillary aim is to bring out the rich rewards to be reaped from drawing on the combined resources of Philosophy and History in studying a work like the Essays.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

Topics to be covered include the literary form of the Essays and its relation to Montaigne's conception of self-knowledge and the self; Montaigne's response to ethical diversity and his views on the authority of ethical beliefs; Montaigne's account of virtues and vices (esp. cruelty and cowardice, and the distinction between public and private virtues); the nature of friendship and its bearing on self-knowledge; Montaigne's political views and political philosophy; the nature of Montaigne's scepticism and its relation to ancient sceptical traditions, on the one hand, and

Descartes' method of doubt, on the other; human nature and the nature of non-human animals; the role Montaigne's response to the reformation and to the French wars of religion plays in his thinking; the role of the New World in Montaigne's thinking.

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- To allow students to develop an in-depth understanding of some key themes and arguments in Montaigne's Essays.
- To develop an understanding of the role of in the formation of modern theoretical and practical philosophy.
- To make sense of Montaigne's Essays by reference to their historical context.
- To engage critically with some of Montaigne's claims and arguments.
