Description

Introductory description

The Philosophy and Literature dissertation offers a structured opportunity for independent learning on a topic of interdisciplinary relevance. It aims to encourage students to bridge the two disciplines. It is a particularly useful choice for students thinking of going on to graduate work, but it is also relevant for career destinations requiring skills in gathering and synthesising material.

Module aims

The overall aim is to write a 10,000-word dissertation on an interdisciplinary topic agreed between students and supervisors. The dissertation topic has to span both disciplines. Students wishing to focus predominantly on either Philosophy or Literature will be advised to undertake a dissertation in either Philosophy or ECLS.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

Students may choose their own subject.

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Design and carry out a project involving research or a critical review in a chosen field at the interfaces of philosophy and literature.
- Develop a deep knowledge of the chosen research topic.
- Develop written communication skills.
- Develop time-management skills in the establishment of a research and writing plan.
- Develop research skills.
- Develop IT skills in presenting the dissertation and using on-line resources while researching the topic.
