Module aims

This module aims to introduce students to an interdisciplinary, cross-national and historically informed understanding of the idea of change and its significance for organisations in the contemporary period. Students will be introduced to multiple perspectives, models and maps for understanding the nature of organisational change and how it is managed.

The module will develop students' skills in understanding how the management of organisational change is a collective 'sensemaking' process involving the development of shared cultures and discourse carried through technological intermediaries. It will also introduce students to the dilemmas faced by managers in implementing change.

The module seeks to enable students to critically examine models of change and the development of the learning organisation.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

Section 4: Understanding Change processes: key issues and debates

- Changing in contexts of ambiguity and uncertainty
- designing for wickedness (polivocality) and for resilience in face of extreme ambiguity and uncertainty?
- The relevance of time in change: history and the future
- Change in light of Grand-Challenges

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of the major perspectives for analysing the idea of change and how it is relevant to contemporary organisations.
- Demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of the way in which senior managers lead change initiatives and the institutional constraints under which they work
- Critically analyse how managers exercise power and engage in politics to influence other employees in order to achieve outcomes.
- Identify and evaluate the distinctive tensions faced by middle managers in change processes and recognise ways of overcoming these problems, including issues of language, culture and discourse
- Identify and evaluate ways in which the underlying assumptions of the change discourse create their own self-sustaining dynamic and are a force for isomorphic processes across different types of organisation

- Critically assess a variety of perspectives on the management of organisational change.
- Recognise and critically engage with assumptions underpinning the assumptions of the management of organisational change
