Description

Introductory description

PH143 - Key Topics in Continental Philosophy

Module aims

The aim of the module is to introduce students to key topics and thinkers in continental philosophy. Texts by central figures in this tradition will be analysed and discussed in relation to specific philosophical problems and themes. These problems and themes include

- the Enlightenment;
- evil, choice, and autonomy;
- human freedom;
- recognition and social critique;
- embodiment, sex, and gender;
- nature in the age of climate change.

The work of philosophers who can be studied at honours level will be introduced. These authors include Kant, Hegel, Nietzsche, Heidegger, Sartre, Merleau-Ponty, Arendt, and Foucault.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

- Week 1: Enlightenment (Kant, Foucault)
- Week 2: Evil (Schelling, Arendt)
- Week 3: Recognition (Hegel)
- Week 4: Genealogy (Nietzsche)
- Week 5: Intersubjectivity (Husserl, Heidegger)
- Week 7: Authenticity (Heidegger, Sartre)
- Week 8: Embodiment (Merleau-Ponty, Butler)
- Week 9: Justice (Levinas, Derrida)
- Week 10: Nature (Latour, Chakrabarty)

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- be familiar with many of the main philosophical approaches and concerns associated with post-Kantian continental philosophy.
- be able to engage in a close, critical reading of key texts in this philosophical tradition,
- to present and discuss in an informed way the main ideas and problems presented in these texts.
- have a systematic knowledge and understanding of many of the key topics associated with continental philosophy as discussed in some of the classic texts associated with this philosophical tradition.
- on this basis, students should also be able to understand how the ideas and arguments they encounter differ and to offer an independent critical assessment of them.

Indicative reading list

Readings will include short excerpts from key figures in continental philosophy selected for each week's theme. These readings from primary texts will be accompanied by introductory study material and/or readings from introductory secondary literature.

Subject specific skills

The ability

- (a) to understand the characteristic features and aims of continental philosophy;
- (b) to recognise the different forms taken by certain recurrent topics and concepts in different continental philosophers;
- (c) to analyse and critically evaluate the different theories and arguments connected with the topics presented, and to come to an independent assessment of their merits;
- (d) the ability to pursue independent philosophical research.

Transferable skills

The ability

- (a) to analyse, evaluate, critique and apply complex information gathered from reading, reflection, reasoning or communication;
  - (b) to discuss the issues raised by their close reading in speech and in writing
  - (c) communicate information (verbally and in written form) to people both expert and non-expert in the field;
  - (d) the ability to effectively manage schedules and deadlines.
