Description

Introductory description

The International Political Economy of Everyday Life provides a new engagement with the field of International Political Economy by relating it to our daily experiences. By using topics such as social media, debt, food, and clothes as thematic entry points, this module shows how concepts and methods from IPE can be used to understand and question the world around us. It encourages critical analysis through learning activities that licence everyday life as a starting point for IPE enquiry and invites ethical self-reflection on our different positions in capitalist hierarchies and global market relations.

Module aims

- To apply concepts and methods from IPE to the study of everyday life
- To develop self-directed learning through the selection of personal experiences to investigate
- To critically reflect on our positions and subjectivities within capitalist social relations
- To build communication and teamwork skills through pre-seminar learning activities that are discussed in class
- To develop writing skills through the assessment

Assessment

You must pass all assessment components to pass the module.

Assessment group A

	Weighting	Study time	Eligible for self-certification
I-PEEL tile	100%	35 hours	Yes (extension)

WeightingStudy time*Eligible for self-certification

A tile is the name we gave to the entries on the I-PEEL website which use an everyday object, subject, or practice as an entry point to IPE analysis. This assessment will require students to: (1) start with the object/subject/practice and set up the central question they will address; (2) introduce a relevant concept to help do this; (3) speak to the question about the object/subject/practice through the concept; (4) outline some academic implications of the analysis. Submission will be on the 2nd Wednesday of the subsequent term. Each answer should not exceed 2500 words and should be fully referenced.
