Description

Introductory description

This module introduces students to key concepts, theories and research in the sociology of education. Taking a plural approach that draws on a range of sociological ideas, the module explores the relationship between educational and social inequalities and discusses important theoretical concepts and debates. Students will consider social class, gender, race, and disability, and employ their 'sociological imagination' as we explore and critique contemporary uses of sociological ideas in educational research.

Module aims

- Introduce key concepts, theories and research in the sociology of education
- Identify and understand the historical, political and global issues that the sociology of education addresses
- Explore the relationship between educational and social inequalities
- Examine and critique contemporary uses of sociological ideas in educational research

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

- Foundations and developments in the sociology of education
- Social Class and the myth of meritocracy
- Gender and children's experience of school life
- Ethnicity and schooling
- Ableism in education
- Culture, Family and Schooling
- Contemporary theorising in the sociology of education

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Understand and evaluate concepts and theories in the sociology of education
- Explain the relationship between education and social inequality, drawing on theoretical and empirical examples
- Develop coherent lines of argument that illustrate sound interpretation of relevant theories, concepts, and research findings
- Recognise and examine the value of sociological concepts for educators
