Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate an advanced and detailed critical understanding of some of the core concepts of psychoanalytic theory and its key figures.
- Conceptualise and draft an extended research paper investigating issues raised by the module, based on a topic that the students construct themselves in consultation with tutor.

- Develop the ability to read narratives, statements, and events in light of the psychoanalytic concept of the symptom, with clear comprehension of the historical evolution of analytic categories, and differing and competing models of understanding within the discipline.
- Understand the political implications of the mobilisation of unconscious desires in the creation and maintenance of oppressive and exploitative political and bureaucratic structures, and be able to apply this understanding to specific examples from their daily experience.
- Acquire an awareness of specific texts, figures, and debates in current criticism of psychoanalysis as an intellectual discipline, as well as their historical evolution.

Indicative reading list

Reading lists can be found in Talis

Subject specific skills

-Demonstrate an advanced critical understanding of some of the core concepts of psychoanalytic theory and its key figures, as well as of how the discipline of psychoanalysis can be used to read literary and broader cultural texts.

-Develop an advanced analytic and symptomatic mode of reading of texts, with special attention to the manifestation of unconscious desires and structures of meaning, and how these interact with specific cultural and historical formations.

-Develop the ability to read cultural texts for unacknowledged and disavowed fantasy structures, and to understand the political implications of the mobilisation of unconscious desires in the creation and maintenance of oppressive and exploitative bureaucratic and political structures. Develop an ability to apply these ideas to examples from daily life.

Transferable skills

-Conceptualise and write an extended research paper on a topic devised by student in discussion with tutor, using secondary sources in appropriate fashion; contribute critical readings and interpretations to seminar discussion; engage with peers in seminar discussion.
