Module aims

The module examines and analyses the law of civil liability for wrongfully-inflicted damage or injury: the law of "wrongs" or tort. We consider the development, through cases, of doctrines intended to deal with the problems of losses which are attributable to human fault. Stress is laid on the processes and techniques involved in judicial (as opposed to legislative or administrative) law-making; on the relevance and responsiveness (or otherwise) of the doctrines thus developed to society's actual problems in the areas concerned; and on the policies and philosophies underlying the rules.
