

TH251-15 Theatre and the Creative Industries

26/27

Department

SCAPVC - Theatre and Performance Studies

Level

Undergraduate Level 2

Module leader

David Coates

Credit value

15

Module duration

10 weeks

Assessment

100% coursework

Study location

University of Warwick main campus, Coventry

Description

Introductory description

TH251-15 Theatre and the Creative Industries

Module web page

Module aims

This module is delivered by Theatre and Performance Studies, in partnership with Warwick Arts Centre. It aims to give students a broad understanding of the theatre industry in the UK today, occasionally looking beyond to the wider eco-system of international theatre and performance festivals and international touring.

The module aims to introduce students to principles, practices and practicalities in running arts venues; conceiving programmes of work for venues or festivals; 'making it' as a new company or artist; marketing and audience development; commissioning and producing new work; funding the arts, the Arts Council and its priorities; and creative learning, education and outreach.

Through this module students will become familiar with a wide-range of venues, organisations, companies, artists and individuals working in the UK today, understanding what each is best-known for. Their understanding will be enhanced through a series of weekly assessed presentations presented by themselves and their peers. These presentations will also engage students with current issues within the industry, encouraging students to have their fingers on the pulse of trends and debates, such as: the future of the arts in Europe after Brexit; diversity and 'relevance'; climate change and sustainability; and performing online and digital theatre.

Weekly sessions will be led by the convenor, often alongside industry professionals in-person or online, allowing students to understand each topic first-hand and to develop their professional network. These industry experts will include producers, directors, company managers, festival programmers and so on, enabling students to see the breadth of roles that make theatre happen and to open their eyes to possible career options within the industry. Thus, the module aims to help students to locate possible places for their future self within the industry's ecology. Each industry professional will talk to students about their area of work, as well as setting in-class problem-based tasks, to provide an opportunity for students to try out authentic activities from the workplace.

The module aims to engage students with industry-focussed readings and conversations, such as in policy documents (Arts Council; Department for Digital, Culture, Media and Sport), in venue and company strategies and annual reports, in industry news publications (The Stage and Arts Professional), through Devoted and Disgruntled, and on Twitter.

Outline syllabus

This is an indicative module outline only to give an indication of the sort of topics that may be covered. Actual sessions held may differ.

Week 1: The UK Theatre Ecology

Week 2: Warwick Arts Centre Case Studies: Front of House, Operations HR and Health and Safety, Technical Team, Marketing and Audience Development

Week 3: Programming

Week 4: Funding the Arts

Week 5: Producing

Week 6: Reading Week

Week 7: Creative Learning and Education: Belgrade Theatre

Week 8: Hot Topics in the Arts

Week 9: Making it as a Company, Artist or Actor

Week 10: Festivals

Learning outcomes

By the end of the module, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the realities of working in various roles within the UK's theatre industry.
- Demonstrate an understanding of a wide range of venues, artists, companies and individuals working in the UK theatre industry.
- Discuss and debate the industry's current affairs and priorities.
- Apply industry-specific vocabulary in verbal and written communication and differentiate this from the vocabulary of the academy.

- Evaluate and develop their position in relation to the industry or specific areas of it.
- Apply learning from the module to approach a range of industry-specific tasks logically and practically.
- Use the skills and knowledge developed through the module to apply for a job within the industry.

Indicative reading list

Reading lists can be found in Talis

Specific reading list for the module

Research element

Both assessments include research elements. The first requires students to research either an event or issue within industry news or an industry case study. The second assignment requires students to carry out research for their own industry project.

Interdisciplinary

The module looks beyond the academic subject of theatre and performance studies to consider areas such as cultural policy, the economics and financing of the arts, and the practicalities of the theatre and creative industries today.

International

Although this module primarily focuses on theatre and the creative industries in the UK, some sessions will consider the international scene. The module will investigate the importance of international theatre festivals and international touring to the UK theatre industry, for example. The module may include sessions led by industry experts from overseas joining us online, who would likely expand on the context for the arts in their own nation.

Subject specific skills

Students will develop their ability to network within the industry. They will learn to communicate verbally and in writing using a vocabulary and form that is understood by the industry. Through practical tasks within the classroom, students will develop the skills required to programme work, to market theatre, to apply for arts funding, to work within a creative learning team, or to have a successful career as an artist, practitioner, theatre company or actor.

Transferable skills

Students will develop their presentation and verbal communication skills through their first assessment. Research skills will be developed through both assessment pieces. Project-management, organisation and written communication skills will be used to develop their second assessed piece. In class, students will demonstrate their verbal communication skills to contribute to discussions and debates and ask insightful questions to industry experts. Students will show that they are able to work as a team or perhaps to lead a team when given problem-based authentic tasks within class.

Study

Study time

Type	Required
Seminars	8 sessions of 3 hours (27%)
Tutorials	2 sessions of 15 minutes (0%)
External visits	1 session of 3 hours (3%)
Private study	60 hours 30 minutes (68%)
Total	88 hours

Private study description

Throughout the module students will be expected to engage with industry publications. These will include weekly editions of The Stage and Arts Professional's newsletter, as well as policy documents, annual reports, websites and marketing materials. Students will also be given reading to contextualise sessions, including articles and book chapters from the items listed here and beyond. Students will also be encouraged to see some of the theatre worked on or created by practitioners visiting the seminars. Private study and independent learning will be important for both assessments, as outlined below.

Costs

No further costs have been identified for this module.

Assessment

You must pass all assessment components to pass the module.

Assessment group A1

	Weighting	Study time	Eligible for self-certification
Assessment component
In the News or In the Spotlight: A Case Study	40%	17 hours	Yes (extension)
Each student will work in a pair or small group to present for 10 minutes in-class on either a topic that is 'In the News' that is relevant to the module or an 'In the Spotlight' case study. The presentation should be delivered as if for a professional industry audience, which the students may wish to specify (for example, as if being presented to a room of programmers or funders). 'In the News' could relate to a story in the national or industry press about an issue or incident that has taken place recently or a significant announcement: a new show/ a new venue/ a new artistic director etc. The presentation should capture the issue at hand and refer to authoritative voices in the industry relating to that subject. Students should understand the issue, have a perspective on it and provide an industry context to it (such as the venue it relates to etc). Students should use the case study to present their own stance on the issue or incident and perhaps propose ways forward, if relevant. 'In the Spotlight' puts a spotlight on a recent show, an individual, or an organisation within the industry. Students should consider why they are spotlighting this and emphasise why they believe it's important for their audience to know about this. Students should refer to industry texts – perhaps reviews or newspaper articles. Students should think about how whatever they have spotlighted influences the industry, their own practice or both.

Reassessment component is the same

Assessment component

Industry Project	60%	45 hours	Yes (extension)
Students should produce a personal project relating to an area of the industry that they would like to explore further. This could be a funding application, such as for a creative learning project; a concept or business plan for a new festival, venue or theatre company; an outline of a programme for a festival or a venue; a new strategy for Front of House and Operations for a venue; an application to be a part of a festival or City of Culture; a marketing campaign for a specific show; a national or international tour plan for a show; etc. This should be approximately 3500 words, or equivalent, as the format and mode of presentation might differ. Final year students will additionally provide a 300-word executive summary of the project.

Reassessment component is the same

Feedback on assessment

Written feedback for both assessments.

Availability

Courses

This module is Core for:

- Year 2 of UTHA-W422 Undergraduate Theatre and Performance Studies (with Intercalated Year)